TEACHING EXPERIENCE

2019

Creative Nonfiction Essay Writing (1 Section) – University of Arkansas, Fayetteville Department of English

Introduction to writing creative nonfiction: students read contemporary essays and analyzed them from a craft perspective, completed regular journaling assignments and writing exercises, and learned the workshop format for exchanging feedback. Major writing assignments: memoir, braided essay, collage/hermit crab essay, new journalism.

2018

World Literature II: 1650 – Present (2 Sections) – University of Arkansas, Fayetteville Department of English

Students read selected poetry, fiction, nonfiction, and drama with an emphasis on the literary legacies of racial ideology, European imperialism, and the Transatlantic Slave Trade. Lectures synthesized historical, cultural, and literary perspectives. Students led discussions, maintained reading journals, and performed role-playing exercises to deepen their understanding of the texts. Major writing assignments: translation comparison/adaptation comparison, research paper/closing arguments.

2017 – 2018

World Literature I: Antiquity – 1650 (3 Sections) – University of Arkansas, Fayetteville Department of English

Students read selected poetry, fiction, nonfiction, and drama with an emphasis on literary articulations of sex, gender, and heroic archetypes in long-form narratives. Original lectures introduced dominant and marginal perspectives to enrich student-led discussions. Students engaged with texts through a variety of interactive exercises. Major writing assignments: translation comparison/adaptation comparison, research paper/closing arguments.

2016 – 2017

Composition II (3 Sections) – University of Arkansas, Fayetteville Department of English

Introduction to meta-writing and ethnographic research: students read peer-reviewed articles, learned about rhetorical theory and procedures for ethnographic research, analyzed popular and academic texts, conducted interviews and field research, and presented their findings in oral and written formats. Major writing assignments: literacy critique, literacy study, rhetorical analysis, and analysis of a discourse community.

Composition I (1 Section) – University of Arkansas, Fayetteville Department of English

Introduction to academic writing, research, and critical thinking: students read articles from newspapers, magazines, and blogs, analyzed them rhetorically, and presented their findings in oral and written formats. Exercises familiarized them with MLA guidelines and basic grammatical principles as well as stylistic, organizational, and persuasive strategies. Major writing assignments: summary, synthesis, rhetorical analysis, and argumentative synthesis.
